MISSISSIPPI VALLEY STATE UNIVERSITY

Created by the Mississippi Legislature in 1946 and opened in 1950, Mississippi Valley State University is a regional, state-assisted university, which offers programs of study at the bachelor's and master's degree levels. The University opened in 1950 under the name Mississippi Vocational College. In 1964, the name changed to Mississippi Valley State College, and in 1974, The Valley became Mississippi Valley State University. The name changes reflect the expanding mission and program offerings of the University. The late Dr. James Herbert White was Valley's first president, serving from 1950 to 1971. The late Dr. E.A. Boykins served as the institution's second president, serving from 1971 to 1981. The late Dr. Joe L. Boyer served as Valley's third president from 1982 to 1988. Dr. William W. Sutton served as Valley's fourth president from 1988 to 1998. Dr. Lester C. Newman served as the fifth president from 1998 to 2007. Dr. Donna H. Oliver served as the sixth president from 2009 to 2012. She was the first female to lead the institution and the first African-American female to lead a Mississippi public university. Dr. William B. Bynum, Jr. served as the seventh president from 2013 until 2017. Dr. Jerryl Briggs, Sr. was unanimously selected as the eighth president on October 19, 2017. Building upon the foundation laid by his predecessors, Dr. Briggs has enhanced the mantra "ONE GOAL. ONE TEAM. ONE VALLEY" with the addition of the phrase "...IN MOTION", which exemplifies the University's commitment to putting into practice its values as it continues moving onward to obtain preeminence as a premier institution of higher learning.

ACADEMIC REGALIA

The traditional attire worn by university officials, faculty, visiting dignitaries, and candidates for degrees originated during the 14th century in medieval England. In that period, individuals were clad in gowns and hoods, which inevitably served to keep them warm because all the buildings were unheated. As a particular dress for distinction, for example, one could easily distinguish an Oxford man from a Cambridge man. The hood was needed to cover the heads of schools.

With the advent of colleges and universities in America, the dress for formal academic affairs took the design of the everyday costumes that were worn in England at universities in the Middle Ages. As the institutions began to increase in number, a group of representatives from leading colleges and universities gathered at Columbia University on May 16, 1885, and agreed to establish appropriate standards and practices for academicians. The Intercollegiate Bureau of Academic Costume was chartered in 1902 by the Regents of the University of the State of New York to serve as an arbiter on academic matters. The 1885 Code was revised in 1932 at the instigation of the American Council on Education and subsequently in 1959.

The origins of formal academic attire, often referred to as “dress” or “regalia,” are deeply imbedded into ceremonial exercises of most of today’s colleges and universities. The Uniform Costume Code, which is supported by the American Council on Education, has been widely adopted throughout the United States except for a few schools which continue to use the styles of England. In brief, the uniform code is evidenced in three types—bachelor’s, master’s and doctor’s. A scholar dressed in academic attire today may be distinguished by the style of gown, hood, mortar board cap, and color of tassel. The cap, gown and hood are generally black. However, in recent years many colleges and universities have adopted institutional colors for their gowns.

The bachelor’s gown is full-cut, falling in a straight line from an elaborate yoke with long pointed sleeves; the master’s gown has oblong closed sleeves which terminate in square ends below the knee, and an arc of a circle just above the bottom. There is a slit near the elbow for the arm to come through. A short sleeve master’s gown is also available. The doctor’s gown is an elaborate, full-cut flowing costume distinguished by velvet panels down the front and around the neck. It is characterized by voluminous bell-shaped sleeves on which appear three velvet bars. The color of the bars is normally black but it may be different to designate a field of study, such as green for medicine.

All hoods are lined with silk in the official academic color (or colors) of the institution conferring the degree, edged in velvet. The velvet color indicates the subject to which the degree pertains. The bachelor’s hood is rather short with narrow velvet edging. The master’s hood is considerably longer, has a wider velvet edging and exposes more of the lining. The doctor’s hood has wide panels at the side and is easily recognized since, of the three types of hoods, it has the widest velvet edging, greatest length, and fullest exposure of the lining. The black mortar board cap, with tassel, is worn with each type of gown. Those holding bachelor’s and master’s degrees wear tassels that are either black or the color appropriate to the field of study which they have pursued. A velvet cap with gold tassel is frequently worn by those holding a doctor’s degree.
